Fronteras en Salud Reproductiva (FRONTERAS) es un programa de investigación mundial dirigido por el Population Council y financiado por la Agencia de Estados Unidos para el Desarrollo Internacional. El objetivo del programa es mejorar la prestación de servicios de planificación familiar y salud reproductiva en los países en vía de desarrollo. FRONTERAS se dedica a tareas de investigación operativa, un tipo de estudio que utiliza técnicas de investigación sistémicas para mejorar la prestación de servicios e influir en políticas afines. El programa está llevando a cabo cerca de 100 proyectos en África, Asia, Europa Oriental y América Latina.

El Population Council, organización internacional gubernamental sin fines de lucro fundada en 1952, trabaja en pos de mejorar el bienestar y la salud reproductiva de generaciones presentes y futuras de todo el mundo y de ayudar a alcanzar un equilibrio humanitario, equitativo y sostenible entre la población y los recursos.

MEASURE Communication produce materiales con contenido de índole mundial y específico de los países (impresos, audiovisuales y electrónicos), ofrece asistencia y capacitación técnica a instituciones de países en vías de desarrollo para mejorar la comunicación de hallazgos de investigación a autoridades normativas y otras audiencias generales, facilita redes de medios de comunicación y extiende el uso de nuevas tecnologías y formatos destinados a lograr una comunicación eficaz.

El Population Reference Bureau es el líder en proveer información oportuna y objetiva acerca de tendencias de población nacionales e internacionales y sus consecuencias.

Este trabajo ha sido financiado por la Agencia de Estados Unidos para el Desarrollo Internacional (USAID) mediante los programas FRONTERAS y MEASURE Communication, a través de los acuerdos cooperativos N° HRN-A-00-98-00012-00 y HRN-A-00-98-000001-00 respectivamente.
